Chapter 116: The Temporal Flow of the Fifth Clones’ Inner Worlds

Following the precedent set by the third and fourth clones, the fifth clones of Sung Jin-Woo and Sung Su-Ho infused their inner worlds with a unique temporal flow.

Inside their respective realms—the Tenebris Sanctum and the Pyraetherial Dominion—time moved at an accelerated rate: one second in the outside world equaled one year within the inner worlds.

This extraordinary temporal compression allowed their creations to flourish at an unparalleled pace. Civilizations, armies, and natural phenomena developed over what felt like centuries within the inner worlds, while only moments passed outside.

Key Impacts of the Temporal Flow:

1. Rapid Development of Armies:
The emissaries—Obscuras and Ignirion—used this temporal advantage to train and expand their forces, achieving levels of expertise and power that would otherwise take millennia.

2. Advanced Societies:
The inhabitants of these inner worlds evolved rapidly, building grand cities, forging legendary artifacts, and mastering unique forms of magic and combat.

3. Deeper Strategic Preparation:
The fifth clones could test and refine complex strategies, ensuring their forces were always ready for unforeseen multiversal conflicts.

With time as their ally, the inner worlds of the fifth clones became wellsprings of innovation, creativity, and power, further solidifying the Divine Triad's supremacy across the multiverse.
